Fugitive from Justice Arrest- Bow, New Hampshire.

Authorities arrested Demiko Fox, a 22-year-old from Bothell, Washington, who was being sought as a fugitive from justice. The US Marshals, Bow Police, and detectives from the Kirkland Washington Police Department responded to the Hampton Inn on South St this morning to apprehend Fox.

At approximately 9 am, Fox was arrested by the US Marshals and the Bow Police Department without incident. Fox was transported to the Bow Public Safety Center, where he was booked and processed as a fugitive from Justice. Fox is facing murder in the second-degree charges in connection with the death of a seven-year-old girl in Kirkland, Washington. Following the arrest, Fox was transported to the Merrimack County Department of Corrections without bail.

Fox will be arraigned tomorrow at 11 am, at the 6th Circuit District Division Concord Court and will be extradited to Washington state for further proceedings.

“We are grateful for the outstanding collaboration that led to the successful arrest, which would not have been possible without the exceptional teamwork and coordination between the US Marshals and the Kirkland Washington Police detectives. Their collective efforts ensured a smooth and incident-free operation, and we appreciate their dedication to upholding justice.” Chief Ken Miller.
